COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Andrew Nelson, Despondent from Drink, Took Carbolic Acid.

Andrew Nelson, aged 32, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Nelson, committed suicide Wednesday forenoon by drinking ten and twelve carbolic acid, at the home of his parents at the foot of Dugway hill, on the road to South Windham.

Medical Examiner Dr. Louis I. Mason was called and after an examination pronounced death due to suicide. Nelson was unmarried and had been employed by his father on the farm for a number of years. It is said that Nelson was despondent because of the effects of liquor. Another theory is that jealousy was the prime reason for his act.

Wednesday morning he entered his home and shortly before ten o'clock said to his mother as he lay down on the couch in the kitchen, "It's no use. I can't work. I have been drinking and I'm going upstairs to bed." He then went upstairs and shortly after Mrs. Nelson came to Willimantic.

tic on the ten o'clock trolley to do some shopping. Mr. Nelson returned about 12 o'clock and not seeing her son about, went upstairs to see how he was and upon entering his bedroom was surprised to see him lying fully dressed upon the bed. She went to the bed and saw that he was dead.

When Dr. Mason arrived he found that the lips, mouth and throat were badly burned with acid. A search was made and a bottle containing a dram of carbolic acid.

No trace of a bottle could be found, indicating that the young man had done away with the bottle before drinking the contents and then walked upstairs and threw himself across the bed, where he was found dead by his mother.

The fact that he walked upstairs after drinking the acid would also bear out the statement of the man who had been drinking heavily of late, as one saturated with liquor is not so quickly susceptible to the deadly effect of carbolic acid as a person in a normal condition.

Funeral services were given to Nelson at the home of his father, Mr. August Nelson, on Wednesday afternoon. The body was buried in the cemetery of the First Baptist church.

Mr. Job's Good Work.
If some persons who may have wondered why the state of Connecticut needs an official ornithologist, will read Mr. Job's monthly bulletin, and keep then reading the question, they will find the answer. It does not seem to be sufficient to keep telling the people that they need to encourage birds in order to keep them from insects; apparently it is necessary to hammer in the lesson. That is the task set for State Ornithologist Job, and he is going about it in a sensible manner. He will produce an effect in time.—New Haven Register.

JEWETT CITY

Helen Plank, 16, Jumps from Railroad Bridge to Avoid Train—Rescued from Twenty Feet of Water by Baggage-master John Farrell.

Helen Plank, a ten year old girl, was crossing the lower railroad bridge at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon, when about in the center of the south span the north bound 2:33 train in charge of Conductor L. L. Davis and Engineer Phillips bore down upon her. The child lost her head and in trying to run fell through the bridge, twenty feet to the water and rocks beneath.

The engineer saw the girl fall, applied the emergency brakes and brought his train to a standstill. The crew ran out and down the bank and saw the little girl in the deep water below the bridge, being kept afloat by her dress and violent struggles. Baggage-master John Farrell, seeing that in a moment she would be on land, plunged in, swam to the little girl and succeeded in getting her to the central pier of the bridge. They both were drawn up by other members of the train crew.

She was taken to the office of Dr. R. R. Agnew, who took twelve stitches in her forehead and neck, and had a concussion of the brain and is considered in a serious condition.

DAWLEY SHOT HIMSELF.
Medical Examiner Jennings Views Body Found at Pachaug—Burial with No Funeral Services.

Medical Examiner George H. Jennings visited the site of the death of Alvin J. Dawley, which occurred on or near June 26, near the shore of Leonard cove, an arm of the Pachaug reservoir, about a mile above the dam on the west side of the pond.

The medical examiner pronounced death probably instantaneous and caused by a bullet wound in the head, delivered by the dead man's own hand and with suicidal intent. The revolver with which the deed was done lay beside the body, and the bullet entered the right side of the head just above the ear, passed straight through the skull and brain, coming out at nearly the same place on the right side, as was indicated by the larger and irregular hole in the skull. The bullet of sylvanite in his pocket had not been touched. The body showed no signs of violence.

The body was taken to the Undertaker Rix of Voluntown and was buried in the Pachaug cemetery Wednesday afternoon. There were no services.

Measure Everybody.
When, some months ago, there was a great to-do because the police measured and photographed certain bankers who had been accused but not convicted of finance so high as to be decidedly against the suggestion that many more than police interests would be served if the state were empowered and obliged to take and preserve full Bertillon records of all its citizens.

That done, we said, there would be no need for a special rogues gallery. It would be a case of no new kind, and nobody would object to the process found so objectionable by the sensitive. At any rate, no objections could be avoided, even by those for whom a subsequent identification might be inconvenient, and other people could not, since such identification, no matter how easy it were made, would not have any terrors for them.

The same suggestion, we notice, was offered and more seriously, in one of the papers read last week before the American Prison association, convened in annual session in Washington.

Albert G. Hall of Minneapolis, the author of the paper, declared that the real task of creating an all-embracing record of this kind should be undertaken by the federal government as a part of its census system, and told how immensely valuable would be the possession of full and accurate data concerning every unit of the population.—N. Y. Times.

Blessing or a Sneeze?
Seldom has the glory of autumn flowers been brighter than now. The rainbow which nature lays upon the earth has found its beginnings in the fields and meadows. And glittering among the crimson and the purple and the rich tints waving billows of yellow brightness above them all, is the glad, glorious goldenrod.

Was there ever a richer, a more triumphant flower? No wonder lovers of flowers have gloried in it, have loved it, raved over it. No wonder they have repeatedly sought to make it by legislative enactment the national flower. Already, however, six states of the union have made it their state flower, and the number grows.

But before we go any farther, there is a question to be answered. Against that flower so fair to see a serious charge has been preferred. It has been indicted on the allegation that it produces hay fever, that it induces asthma, that it is the root of the chronic sneeze. Here is something that needs to be investigated. If the goldenrod is guilty, it is no character to be taken into our homes, to introduce at
